“The Invention of the Jewish People” is littered with references that may baffle a non-Jewish-reader yet it is worth sticking with, because it builds and builds and builds. Sand starts by establishing his own impeccable Jewish-ethnic credentials (very important!) before exploring the European origins of ethno-nationalism.

It was the Jewish American physicist Theodore Maiman who first fired a laser on May 16, 1960; however, his work was based on the theoretical foundations first established by Albert Einstein in 1917, who was also Jewish. The tradition of Jewish people innovating laser technology continues even today with the scientist Zhores Alferov.

The Invention of the Jewish People by Shlomo Sand "The Invention of the Jewish People" is an interesting yet controversial scholarly book about Jewish history through the eyes of leading historian Shlomo Sand. What makes this book controversial is the fact that the author denies such a thing as a Jewish "race" that were descendents of the first exiles with everything that it entails.

The “eternal Jew” and “the longest hatred” are equally misleading labels. Neither Jews themselves nor attitudes toward Jews were static or unchanging. Even apparently identical images can bear radically different meanings. But the history of anti-Jewish iconography does reveal one constant in western culture, well-known to Nazi propagandists—the visceral force of the visual image.
