Sanger was a sociopathic, self-aggrandizing, baby-killer and full time kook. She fell for (((communism))) and (((free love))) and was thus funded and controlled by the (((element))). Like Marx, she ignored her own children with lethal consequences. And, she was a total fruitcake of a spiritualist and Rosicrucian.

~~Review: Woman Rebel: The Margaret Sanger Story - WWAC~~

Margaret Sanger spent her lifetime breaking the rules of societal expectations of what it meant to be a woman, and women now are certainly better off for it. That said, she was no saint, and certainly had missteps along the way. I'm not a big comic book fan, so it surprised me how much I enjoyed this format while reading this.

In Woman Rebel, Sanger, though her story is definitely of the superhero variety, comes across visually as Mary Poppins on a bad day -- red-haired, booted, angry, her shoulders stooped, her mouth a weird worm crawling across her face. (I've seen pictures of Sanger and this isn't even close; she's actually quite fetching.)
